ABSTRACT OF DISCLOSURE

Telephone apparatus comprises a telephone and a remote controller separate therefrom. The telephone has a builtin keypad and an internal operating circuit including a 5 control circuit connected with the keypad for accepting keying signals therefrom to process a telephone call. The remote controller includes built-in keypad a generating keying signals and an internal 10 transmitter for transmitting said keying signals in a wireless format. There is a signal receiver internally of the telephone and connected to the control circuit for receiving said wireless keying signals from the signal transmitter and relaying the same to the 15 control circuit for processing a telephone call. The remote keypad represents a second keypad for convenience.